When the sweet springtine and rall,
Was the miller's lovely drughter,
Fairest of them all.

For his bride a soldier song it her,
And a winning tongue rad he;
On the banks of All an Water,
None so gay as sne.

On the bank: of Anan Water,
When brown Autumn spreads its store,
There I saw the miller's daughter—
But she smiled no more;
For the summer greef had brought her,
And the solder false was he;
On the banks of Allan Water,
None was sad as she.

On the backs of Allan Water,
'We en the wintry snow tell fast,
Stin was seen the miller's daughter,
Chilling blew the blast.
But the miller's lovely daughter
Both from cold and care was free;
On the banks of Allan Water,
There a corpse lay she.

Song

"The Monarch of the Wood,"

Bro. J. HULL.

EHOLD the monarch of the woods!

The mighty old oak are,

He braves the raging of the storm

On land and rolling sea.

He waves his branches decked with green In summer's earlien glow.

And ivy clothes his leafless form

Through winter's frost and snow.

King Three the conqueror of all,

We holdly does defy;

To green and he rty will he stand

When ages have gone by.

How out the monarch of the woods,
Upon a summer's day,
Has seen the merry children sport,
And 'neath his shadow play;
From youth to manhood they spring up,
And old age comes at last,
Then green grass waves upon their graves
And all life's dreams are past.
Yet stronger grows the mighty tree,
In hale and hearty prime;
And stands the monarch of the woods
Defying age and time.

Brothers of heart be stou, we are but every Bring from the battler, at sour flag again.

Though by the league, rout it had no stain!

Mothers and wives to prayer from norm till eve,
The Lord of Hosts vill care to those we leave,
Plead that the long of not fight nor chose the field.
But every free neart's right, we dare not yield.

Who needs the trumpe bown to make him bold?
Who needs in undertone of ransom gold?

Pet uch his couns I hide in vault or cave,
We have no time to chide a willing slave.

Mothers and wives to prayer, relief is nigh!

For you each heart will dare deeds not to die.

For some as fire doth flame or foams the sea.

You shall to-night upraise songs of the free!

Wor. Bro. G. G. POPPLETON, W.M.

HEN friendship, love and truth abound Among a band of brothers.

The cup of joy goes gaily yound,
Each shares the bliss of others.
Sweet roses grace the down way Along this vale of sorrow;
The flowers that shed their leaves to day, Shall bloom again co-morrow.

How grand in see how for negotiation, Are holy friendship, love and truth!

On halcyo vings our noments pass, Life's viel cares be uning; Old vinc lays down his sythe and glass, In gay good hur our smiling; With a nine beard and forelock grey His reverend from adorning, We looks like Warrer turned to May—

Night soft ened into Morning.

How grand in age, how fair in youth,
Are holy riendship, love, and truth!

F om these delightful fountains flow Ambrosial rills of pleasure, on man desire, can Heaven bestow A more resplendent treasure? Adorned with gems so richly bright We'll form a constellation Where every star with modest light Shall gild his proper station.

How grand in age, how fair in youth, Are holy friendship, love, and truth!
